16 March 2014: The Second Sunday of Lent

If thy right hand offend thee...

Born in 1489, Archbishop Thomas Cranmer – who is remembered in the Calendar of the Church this coming Friday 21st March – met a grim death as a Reformation Martyr in Oxford in 1556. Cranmer had been, through a lifetime's association with Henry VIII, the author of the split with the authority of Roman Catholicism and the architect of an independent Church in England with its own liturgy and structures of authority. Alas for him, times changed. The reinstatement of Roman Catholic polity under Queen Mary I cast Cranmer in the light of enemy of the state, and although he twice recanted his long-held opposition to Rome and repudiated his Protestant convictions, he was brought to trial and – on the morning of 21st March – to the University Church in Oxford, there to make a final recantation before the congregation there assembled.

Realising he had nothing to lose but his integrity (and presumably his soul!), Cranmer reckoned that to die was one thing, but to die without conviction would be to be lost eternally. So, to the astonishment of those assembled, he reversed his position, condemned the Pope and the Catholic Church, and said - memorably – "...and now I come to the great thing which so much troubleth my conscience, more than any thing that ever I did or said in my whole life, and that is the setting abroad of a writing contrary to the truth, which now here I renounce and refuse, as things written with my hand contrary to the truth which I thought in my heart, and written for fear of death, and to save my life, if it might be; and that is, all such bills or papers which I have written or signed with my hand since my degradation, wherein I have written many things untrue. And forasmuch as my hand hath offended, writing contrary to my heart, therefore my hand shall first be punished; for when I come to the fire, it shall first be burned..."

John Foxe – in his Book of Martyrs (1563) – records that Cranmer saw to it that this was the case, holding his right hand in the flames of the fire before the rest of his body was even touched, so that it was burned away to a stump before his death! He died quickly afterwards.

Folly or wisdom? Bravery or foolishness? Truth or error? Anglo-Catholics particularly harbour ambivalent feelings about Cranmer's doctrine and legacy BUT surely cannot fail to be impressed and encouraged by Cranmer's resolute conviction to his cause. Conviction.

Tony Benn – who died a peaceful death this week – was always keen to point out the need for 'conviction politics' – the need, in the end, to operate out of principle rather than expediency – and, in a world obsessed with personality and spin, to be concerned with underlying belief rather than 'the way things come across'...

It makes you think, doesn't it. As Lent unfolds, how are we doing? How clear are we about our underlying convictions and commitments? Where is our heart? And what are we prepared to renounce for our health and the health of God's world? After all, Jesus said, "if thy right hand offend thee..."
